AN 9

APPEAL

From the

COUNTRY

To the

CITY,

For the Preservation of

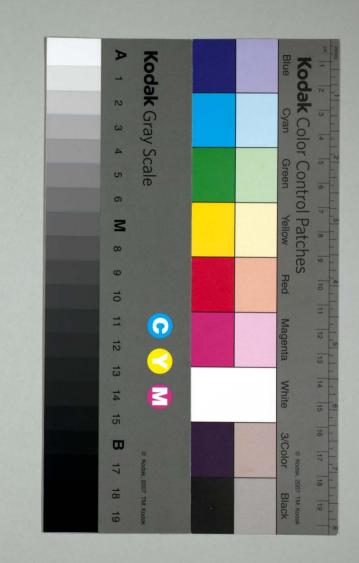

His Majesties Person, Liberty, Property, and the Protestant Religion.

Salus Populi, Suprema Lex.

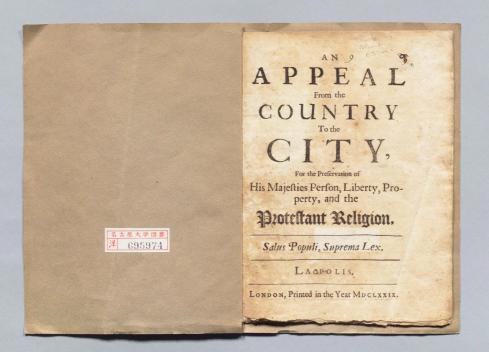

LAOPOLIS.

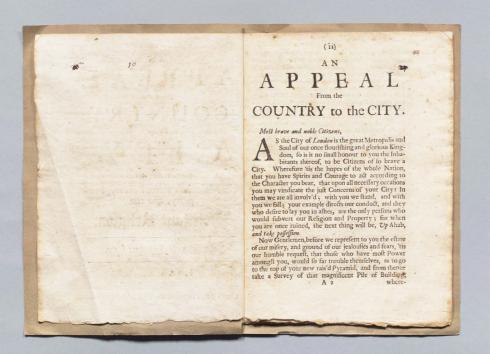

LONDON, Printed in the Year MDCLXXIX.

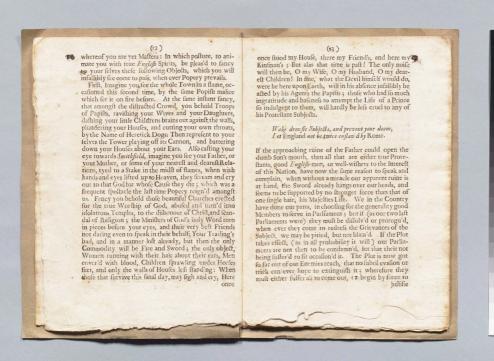

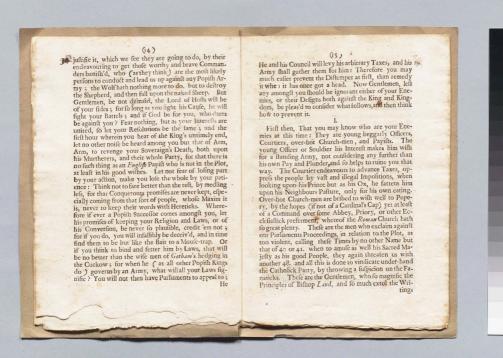

名古屋大学附属図書館所蔵 Hobbes I 40695974 Nagoya University Library, Hobbes I, 40695974

(7) Cudgelling from another man's Servant with less re-17 gret, than from his own ; however, God deliver us from 16 tings of the late same spirited Prelate Dr. Heylin, who hath made more Papifts by his Books, than Christians both. by his Sermons. These are those Episcopal Tantivies. In the next place, to discover to you how long this who make even the very Scriptures Pimp for the Court. who out of Urim and Thummim can extort a Sermon. Plot hath been on foot; I must acknowledge, that there is some coherence between the beginning of the late to prove the not paying of Tithes and Taxes to be the Sin against the holy Ghost, and had rather see the King-Civil Wars, and this our prefent Age; for as well then, as now, the ambitious Popists and I rench Faction were dom run down with blood, than part with the least hem of a confecrated Frock, which they themselves made the chief, nay the only Incendiaries which fet us all in a holy. These are the persons who commend Oates and Flame; the Catholick Canfe, like the Chefnut in the Fa-Bedlow, but yet find fault with their Evidence, when ble, hath ever fince Queen Maries Reign been in the Fire: wherefore as the Fox made use of the Ape's, so by crediting some part of the Plot, and suspecting the reft, by speaking three words for it, and two against both then and now the Papists make use of the Episcopal it, they cunningly endeavour to invalidate the whole. and Court-Parties claw, to take it out; the first of the'e Lastly, The chief and most dangerous of your Enemies they allure to their affiftance, by the fright of Presbytery; are Papifts, who to make fure of their own Game, allure the latter, by the apprehension of a Republick : although all the three fore-mention'd Parties to their fide, by the nothing is less defign'd, or more improbable. Secretary Arguments aforefaid. Their defign is to bring in Pope-Windebank's many Orders (which stand recorded at this day) to secure the Roman Catholicks from the execution ry, which they can no ways effect, but either by a Poof all Penal Laws against them, in the late King's time, pith Successor, or by the French Arms: The first of these we may our felves prevent; and for the latter, if they are a sufficient evidence, that they then received no less conquer, they will undoubtedly conquer for themselves, countenance, than now: and for that vain pretence of and not for him that brought them in. And if we ever their Loyalty to the late King, nothing will appear more should be reduced to that extremity, either to submit ridiculous, if we consider, I. That they had no other Party to expect any advantage from, for that no Goto the French, or to our own Popilh Successor, every man that hath any brains or generofity, will foon find vernment but Monarchy, can in England ever support or favour that Religion; neither (notwithstanding their it his interest of the two, rather to submit to a foreign Power, who hath not violated the Laws of Nature, in many offers) could they ever be entertain'd or received fighting against his own Subjects, and who will also be by the Parliament-Party, unless 'twas under a disguise, less revengeful, and more likely to let us enjoy our own which many for that purpose made use of : So as their Religion and Liberties, than any Popish Successor will: Loyalty and good Service paid to the King, was merely Besides, 'tis natural for every noble Spirit, to bear a

(81)

18 in their own defence, well knowing, that the foundation of those Commotions, was only in opposition to their Party: who as well then, as now, had a defire to run the hazard of a War. 2ly. and lastly, Their Fidelity to their Soveraign appear'd in its true colours, when they were so earnest with Oliver to accept of the Crown; which shew'd, that since nothing but a Crown'd Head could do good to the Popish Religion, they did not care who wore it, so long as it was but worn. Now in acquainting you herewith, I do in effect shew you what is at this time acting amongst them, for 'tis the same Play, though an old one newly revived: and as that which the Papifis then acted, was laid upon the Fanaticks, so was the like to have been done in this present Plot; in order whereunto, just before the discovery of the same, they had seiz'd upon, and imprison'd one Mr. (laypole, for having (as they pretended) a delign to murder His Sacred Majesty; thinking, when it was once reported abroad, that he and the Old Oliverian Party had a Conspiracy to take away the King's Life, then in the mean while the Papists themselves might fafely do it, (as we fee they had at that time, viz. August 1678, refolv'd upon) and that then it would all have gone upon the Non-Conformists score; for however there was never any person living more generous and obliging to the King's whole Party, than this very man the Lord Claypole was, when he bore that Honour; yet he having married Oliver Cromwell's Daughter, rendred him a fit subject to put this trick upon: which by Dr. Oales's discovery of the Plot, came to light, the Evidence against him vanish'd, and the poor Gentleman releas'd. Much such another design was that of the Papifts

(19)

Papists in Scotland, who first by their Counsels procured 19 the poor Inhabitants to be oppressed, and then sending their difguis'd Priests and Emissaries amongst them, encouraged the poor filly Natives to Mutiny against those oppressions, hoping yet by this second Stratagem to cast the Plot upon the Presbyterians: for not only Dr. Oates mentions this in his Evidence, but we all know the Papists themselves were so well affur'd of this Rising, before it happen'd, that at the disbanding of this late Popilh Army, many of the Officers and Souldiers had fecret orders not to fell their Horses, but to be in a readiness, for that they should have occasion to use them again within a fortnight; and fo it happen'd, for within less than a fortnight after the disbanding, the Rebellion broke out in Scotland : So well acquainted were the Authors of this mischief, with the time when it would happen. Now this Infurrection was in two respects advantageous to the Catholick Party; for first, among Foreigners and Strangers who were not acquainted with the depth of their Intrigues, it feem'd to cast the Plot upon the Non-Conformifts ; and 2ly, being beaten by the King's Forces, (whereof no other was to be expected) it might make both them and us less apr to rife upon any account whatsoever. But here give me leave to prefent you with one observation, which is, that if this had been a Fanatical Plot, the same Party would certainly have risen in Fngland, at the same time when their Brethren of Scot. land were in Arms, the encouraging of one another being of more consequence to both, than the expectation of the others fuccess.

B 2

III.

(10) use either in building Ships, or making Ordnance, can 21 be discover'd here, but immediately we charitable Eng-III. After the Catholicks had thus brought the Father's lib (for fear we should be too strong for them) must Head to the Block, and fent the young Princes into communicate it to our dear Brethren the French. Nor Exile, let us reflect upon their ulage of them in France, have we been altogether unkind to the rest of our and fee whether the kindness that the French Catholicks Neighbours, when by procuring a general Peace, we then paid to our King, was fufficient to bring us into have pluck'd the Thorns out of their feet, to put 'em in that Misery wherein we are immers'd, by so entirely our own; made a Peace for them, in order to bring a espousing the French and Papists Cause, even almost to War upon our felves. I confess, when I think how faiththe destruction of the Protestant Religion, and ruine of ful we have been to the French in all these late Wars, as all Christendom besides. Did their banishing of His Maalso how much Service our English Cannon (whereof jefty, and flighting of him whilft he was amongst them, we have too great plenty) did them at their Siege of deferve this kindness at our hands? what charitable Valenciennes, I cannot but call to mind Commines relation phil, com Christians are we grown, thus to return good for evil? of King I ewis the Eleventh's bribing our English Coun. 1.6.c. 2. I must confess they did ever treat his R. H. with some cel, paying at that time yearly Pensions to the Lord Respect, as finding him to retain more favourable incli-Chancellor, Master of the Rolls, Hastings Lord High nations both towards their Religion and Government, Chamberlain, Lord Foward, and all other persons who than His gracious Majesty did; whose understanding had any power or Interest with their Master King Edand wit, as it made him contemn their Superstitious Idoward; for if something of this nature did not prevail latiy and Fopperies; fo did his lenity and good nature, amongst us, His Majesty would never have adher'd to render their Tyranny altogether odious in his fight: any but the Dutch, whose perpetual Interest it is to keep besides, if His Majesty had then discover'd in himself the Crown upon his Head, for that nothing would fo the least inclinations to Popery, it might in all probabimuch advantage France, and ruine Hollana, as to have lity have rendred the Crown of England unaccessible, England become a Commonwealth; when like Rome However, I cannot but afcribe great part of our present and Carthage, being continually clashing together, the Calamities, to his Highnesses Education in that Arbitrary French might in time ruine both. and Popilh Government : With what eagerness have we affifted them in their Conquests, even to the defamation Having but now mentioned Commines, give me leave of our own Honour, and violation of our publick Faith to infert another Story of his, which may be very much Phil. com. with all the rest of Christendom? We first made Them to our purpose, to shew you that when God designs the 45.4.6.8, an Idol, and now we worshipt it; we first taught them destruction of a King or People, he makes them deaf to the Art of Navigation, and now are ready to Strike Sail all discoveries, be they never so obvious. This account to them our felves. Not any new invention that is of 116

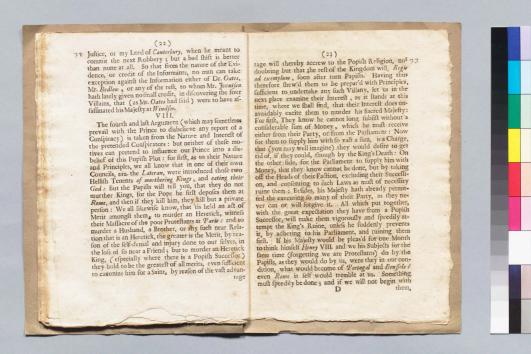

(13) (12) fecret to him which concern'd his Life; whereof certain 2.3 72 is concerning the Duke of Burgundy, who being at War Gentlemen (to whom Cifron had told this) went to adwith Lewis the XI of France, entertain'd as his chief vertise the Duke; with whom at their arrival they found Minister and Favourite the Earl of Campebache, upon this Earl of Campobache, come thither (as was suppos'd) whom he bestow'd great Gifts, committing to his care on purpose to be always ready, fearing lest Cifron, to his whole concerns : But this Earl having no fense either fave his own Life, should have any such intent to reveal of Honour or Gratitude, took the advantage of his the Conspiracy. The Duke return'd this Answer to the Masters the Dukes troubles, and set up a resolution to Gentlemen, who brought him the Message, That the destroy him. For which end and purpose, he began Prisoner used this delay only to respite his own Death, under-hand to treat both with the Duke of Lorrain, and and commanded them that he should discover what he with divers of the Kings Officers that were Quarter'd in knew to them; which way the Earl of Campobache well Champaigne, near to the Dukes Camp. Now to the approv'd of. Upon this Cifron reply'd, That he would Duke of Lorrain he promifed to order the marter, communicate it to no man but the Duke of Burgundy that this Siege of his Masters (the Duke of Bureundy) himself: So that he was again by the Duke's special against Nancy, should take no effect; for he would take command led out to Execution; but in his way thither, care that fuch things as were necessary either for the he defired divers Gentlemen once more to acquaint their Siege or Battery, should be wanting: which promise he Master from him, that it was such a Secret that the Duke was able to perform, for that the principal charge therewould not for a Dutchy but know. Many hearing this, of was committed to him, neither had any man fo great went again to intreat the Duke to vouchfafe him a Authority as he, in the Army under the Duke of Eurhearing, but this treacherous Earl, keeping the Duke's gundy. But to the Kings Officers he promis'd either to Chamber door, would not permit these Gentlemen to kill his Master, or take him Prisoner, demanding for his enter, faying, That the Duke had refolv'd to hear no recompence thereof, the charge of those 400 Lances further from him; wherefore he dispatch'd away new which he had then in keeping, with 20000 Crowns in Messengers to the Provost, to hasten his Execution. ready money, and some good Earldom in France. Now Thus was this Cifron hang'd, to the utter ruine of the whilft the Earl of Campobache was plotting these Trea-Duke of Euroundy, his House, and his Dominions; so fons, one Cifron a Gentleman belonging to the Duke, infatuated was his understanding. After this our wicked and that was acquainted with this Earl's Conspiracy, Earl began to put in practice his Treachery, for the happen'd (in attempting to relieve the Town of Nancy) which purpose he agreed first with a French Wakeman to be taken Priloner by the Duke of Burgundy, who or Physician dwelling in Lyons, call'd Mr. Simon of was fet down before it : Whereupon this Cifron being Pavia; and afterwards with the Kings Embaffador in condemn'd to die, in hopes of a Pardon, offer'd that if Savor : neither of which ways succeeding, he offer'd to the Duke would give him Audience, he would reveal a fecret

(15) (14) ment, or new Religion, but not with the Defign of 25 24 flee with all his Forces from his Master to King Lewis; taking away his own Life, this fometimes hath prevail'd but the King detelling fuch Treasons of a Servant against with him not to believe, that the same Party with whom his Master, fent by the Lord Conté to acquaint the Duke he himself is in a Conspiracy, should have any such other of Burgundy with it : But the Duke (as if he had been Plot against his Life. But this I hope is not our case, himself in the Plot against his own Life) was so sottish for that no Religion or Government can be so much for and flupid a Prince, that he receiv'd this fecond warning his Majesties advantage, as that which is establish'd with no more sence than the former, faying. That if this amongst us: Since in Popery, although his Majesty would discovery were true, the King (being his Enemy) would nebe made absolute over his Subjects, yet his slavery to the ver have advertised him thereof; wherefore he ever after Pope would be fo great, that as well his Liberty as his that loved the Earl rather better than before. But this Revenues would be much less than now. For besides folly of his was justly rewarded; for in a short time after, the valt sums of Money that would then go from the Exwhen the Duke of Burgundy and the Duke of Lorrain chequer to the Church, I dare boldly affirm, that had his were engaged, this Earl of Campobache, with many of his Majesty been never so absolute, he could not in this time Forces, revolted to the Enemy, whereby the Duke of have fqueez'd more money from the Subject, than he hath Burgundy's Forces were routed, and he himself actually already received in Taxes fince his coming in; and that flain. Never did Prince fall more unpityed than this must have been done by a standing Army, which would Duke did ; nor did his people know which most to blame make him odious, and eat up half his profit. 'Tis policy of the two, either he who began this Conspiracy, by his in the Prince not to take away all at once, but to leave wickedness, or the Duke himself, who gave it success, a Nest-Egg, if he designs they should lav again; but by his folly: The application of which Story, I shall for the Church of Rome, who ever reads our Chronicles leave for you to make. will find, that no School-boys have been greater flaves to their Malters, than many of our English Kings were to There are four feveral Arguments, which many times the Pope; and those who were above his discipline, the prevail with Princes, to be incredulous of all pretended Remish Church ever found some way or other to cut him Conspiracies against themselves. The first is drawn from off, either by fetting his own people against him, as their being in, or made privy themselves to part of the they did by King John, or by some infallible Catholick Plot, but not the whole. The second, From their own Poylon, or by some bloody Godfrey Dagger. King Edgood nature and clemency. The third, From the nature gar for his Incontinency was enjoyn'd by Dunstan Abbot of the Evidence. And the fourth From the Nature and of Glassenburg, not to wear his Crown for feven years, Interest of the pretended Conspirators. To begin then to which he was forced to fubmit. King Henry II, to with the first: When the Prince hath been made acexpiate the Murder of Thomas Becket, (committed by quainted with the Delign of introducing a new Government.

26 his Courtiers) was forced to walk bare-footed three miles to visit his Shrine, and then to receive fourscore (17.) lathes upon his bare back from the Monks. King Yohn those he has oblig'd, than those he has offended for 27 for opposing Pope Innocent III. was (after interdicting thole that are offended, have not fuch frequent opporthe Realm for fix years and three months) forced to tunities, nor fuch easie accesses to him as the other have; render his Crown to Pandulphus the Pope's Legat, and and for their disposition, it is much alike, the defire of take it again in Fee-farm at the Rent of a thousand dominion being as great if not greater than the defire of Marks yearly; nor did this fatisfie the Popilh malice, for revenge. We fee therefore, that where any great Conhe was at last poyson'd in Swinsted-Abbey by one Simon a Monk. Furthermore to let you fee, that in the time spiracy has been made, it has been most commonly beof Popery Princes lived not fo peaceably as now, be gun by fuch as were most familiar with the Prince, and most in his favour; for so it was in the Conspiracy of pleas'd to observe, that betwixt the Conquest and our Perennius against Commodus. Plantianus against Severue Reformation leven of our English Kings were murther'd, Sejanus against Tiberius ; all which were Favourites, and viz. King John, Richard I. Edward II. Richard II. Edhighly oblig'd by their feveral Emperors. So that what ward V. Fenry VI. and Richard HI. (not to mention ever Prince trufts too much to the friendship of his dearthe Emperor Henry VII. who was poylon'd in the Euchaest Favourites, may to his own Brother, may sometimes rift by one Bernard a Monk, nor Henry III. of France, find himfelf deceiv'd. The Earl of Campobache (whom flabb'd by Clement the Monk, nor Henry IV. of Irances I mention'd before) had received Favours, fufficient ftabb'd by Raviliac, or those many hundred Examples to have oblig'd him more faithfully to his Mafter the of this nature, which I could produce out of other Chro-Duke, than he afterwards proved. Brutus was as dear; nicles.) So that what ever Prince confiders these things and (many think) as nearly related to Cafar, as any Broaright, I think he can have no Interest to introduce Pother, but yet we fee he had a hand in his Murther. The pery, unless he desires either to be whipp'd by a Monk, nearer a Friend is, the nearer is he to be my Heir, thereor flabb'd or poyfon'dby a lefuit; for in fuch a cafe, 'tis fore the more likely to with my death. Friends are ofthe Jesuits that govern, and not the King. tentimes as dear to us as our Relations therefore the Laws The fecond Motive which may incline a Prince to difof Kindred may as well be violated as the Laws of Friendthip, than which, nothing is more usual. Who betrays believe the report of a Plot, is from his own good nature you in your Bed ? Your Friend ; for your Enemy is not and elemency, which makes him not expect any ill from admitted to your House. Who betrays you in your those to whom he has been so kind. But this is a falla-Estate? Your Friend; for your Enemy is not made your cious way of arguing; for a Prince who would preferve Truffee: So that nothing is more dangerous than a blind himself against Conspiracy, is to have an eye rather upon Friendship. The Turks well now, how much more prevalent Interest is amongst Brothers than Affection, which makes the Laws of their Empire, take fo fevere a courfe with

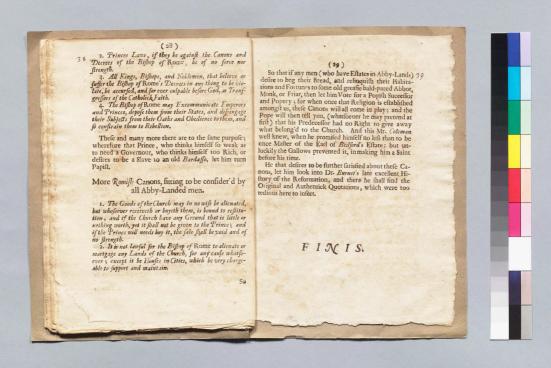

(19) (18) ing acquainted with the Means, feems very prodi-29 28 with the Grand Seigneur's younger Brothers. How magious. ny Princes have been min'd by their next impatient VII. Heirs, nay even fometimes by their own Sons! That most Thirdly, Most Princes believe or disbelieve the Inforprodigious Empire which Tamberlain the Great had acmation which is given them of a Plot, according to the quired, how was it torn in pieces, and destroy'd by a nature of the Evidence, and credit of the Informants. division betwixt his two Sons? Did not Cain kill Abel? First, For the nature of the Evidence, what is it? That And was not Joseph fold into Fgypt by his Brethren? they had a Design to murther the King, and introduce Had not Igrippins her Wakeman, wherewith the poy-Popery. What is there improbable in all this? Was fon'd her own Husband the Emperor Claudius? And there never any Prince murther'd before by a Conspirawas not the her felf afterwards kill'd by her own Son cy? Was there never any Attempt before, to introduce Nero ? If (as we often fee) little petty Interests make into a Countrey a new Religion? Why then have we one Brother wish the other's death, how much more so many Laws made to prevent such a thing, if it seems prevalent will the Interest of a Crown be? nay of two fo improbable ever to be done? When the Romans for-Crowns, viz. one here, and another hereafter in Heaven, bore to make any Law against Parricide, it was out of a promis'd him by an old Fellow with a bald Pate, and prefumption that it would never be acted: But we all a spade Beard : Si violandum est jus, violandum est Regknow, that thefe are things which the Papifts have fenandi gratia. And belides all this, when a Successor veral times before attempted amongst us; witness the observes, that the Life of one single Person, not only Gunpowder-Treason, the Invasion of the Spaniards in keeps him from three Kingdoms, but also makes him, 83. and their many Attempts both against Queen Elihis Family, and whole Party, be banish'd and persecuzabeth's and King James's Persons. So that I cannot apted, you must needs acknowledge, that he lyes under prehend any thing ftrange in their Relation: The only a great temptation to violate the fixth Commandment: miracle that appears to me is, that any one (but those Which things being consider'd, together with that Law that are in the Plot) should question the truth of it; which wipes off all Attainders, whether of Treason or especially when they consider the wonderful manner of Murder, by the descent of the Crown, I cannot but its discovery, wherein the Providence of God appear'd think, that a Prince's good Nature, renders him secure most remarkable, that still as one man's Evidence has only in his own conceit, and not in reality. We all been censured, a fresh Witness hath risen up to supply know, that his R. H. hath held correspondence with and firengthen the former. Had this Plot been a forged Cardinal Norfolk, and other the Pope's Nuncio's, about Contrivance of their own, they would at the very halt introducing Popery; and we are likewise inform'd, that discovery of it, have had half a dozen or half a score Popery was to be introduced by the King's Death: So grafty Fellows, ready to have attefted all the fame thing; how a man could be privy to the Effect, without be-

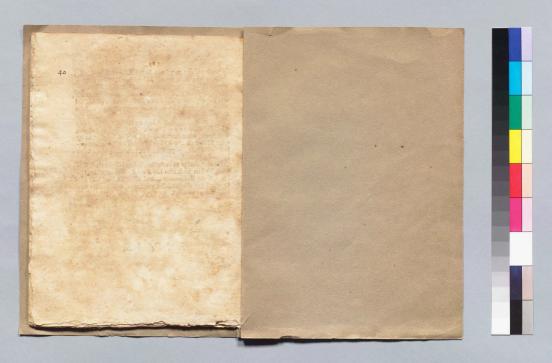

(25) the Parliament and Barons, who at that time made as War upon the King, for his too great countenancing 3.4 them, they will begin with us : for all the favour His of Foreigners. Also in our great Fire of London in 66. Majesty can show them, will not satisfie that greater ex-(if you will believe either Mr. Bedlow's Relation, or pectation which they have from a declared Popilh King. the Account which was then given in to the Committee So that nothing does more justifie the Plot, than their of Parliament appointed for that purpose) many were corrupt Principles, and present Interest; which will make actually taken a Firing it, and brought to Authority; them (being fure to have the fucceeding King on their but all let flip away, and none hang'd for it, but one fide) rather venture to puth for it now, and run the poor Frenchman, who contrary to the Judges persivahazard of the Peoples revenge, than fuffer any longer fion, would violently accuse himself. There is one most the inconvenience of an English Parliament, or danger eminent great Papilt, who in the time of that Fire preof the next Successor being a Protestant. tended to fecure many of the Incendiaries, but fecretly IX fuffer'd them all to escape: who this person was, is al-Having thus therefore shew'd you the danger whereready mentioned by Mr. Bedlow: for a Popish King, or in His Majesties Person now is; give me leave in the a Popish Successor, cannot but rejoyce in the Flames of next place, to inform you Gentlemen, wherein is your fuch a too powerful City. Secondly, the greatest dangreatest danger, both in relation to your City, and ger accruing to your Persons, as well as to the whole your felves : First then, as to your City, the chiefest Kingdom, upon the King's untimely death, will proceed danger whereunto it is obnoxious, is that of Fire; for from a confusion and want of some eminent and intewherefoever the Jesuits Interest prevails, they will refled person, whom you may trust to Lead you up above all things defire the Burning of London : first, against a French and Popish Army : for which purpose because it is the only united Force able to withstand no person is fitter than his Grace the Duke of Mon-Arbitrary Government; and without that, Popery can mouth, as well for quality, courage and conduct, as for never prevail. Secondly, it is the only place where by that his Life and Fortune depends upon the same botreason of their excellent Preaching, and daily Instruction tom with yours: he will stand by you, therefore ought in the Protestant Religion, the people have a lively you to fland by him. And remember, the old Rule is, fense thereof, and doubtless will not part with it to He who bath the worst Title, ever makes the best King; pleasure a Prince; but perhaps rather lose their Lives as being constrain'd by a gracious Government, to supby the Sword in the Wars, than by Faggots in Smithply what he wants in Title; that instead of God and field. Thirdly, it is too powerful for any Prince, that my Right, his Motto may be, God and my People. Upon governs not by the Love of his People, which no Pothe death of Alexander the Great, when there was fo pith Successor can expect to do. We read in our Enggreat a confusion amongst the Officers about choosing a bif Chronicles, that Fenry the 3d. of England threatned Successor to burn the City of London, for their taking part with

(27) (26) is the only Magistrate in the Kingdom that retains any 37 36 Successor to the Empire, no other expedient could be Office of power capable of ferving the Subject: You are found out to pacific the uproar of the Multitude, but the persons who must revenge our Soveraigns violent the choofing of King Philip's illegitimate Son Aridaus, death; which if ever it should happen, the Countries who not withstanding he was a man but of reasonable one and all would be ready to affift you: But Heaven parts himself, might (as they thought) perform that defend us from the occasion; God preserve the King, Office well enough, by the help of his wife Protector and fend your City to prosper: which is the constant Perdiceas. I confess upon the News of his Grace's Baand hearty Prayer of, nishment, the Countries were much surprized, and the Your Friend and Servant. more, for that we all knew they could have no Interest or advantage by his absence, till His Majesty was near Junius Brutus. his end. Which puts me in mind of the Story that Jo-Cobus relates concerning Herod; viz. that Antipater (to secure to himself the Crown) having by his treachery and false accusations prevail'd with Ferod to banish his two innocent Sons Alexander and Aristobulus, as also in his life-time to declare Antipater for his Suc-Postscript. ceffor, did after that, the better to confirm his Title. exasperate Herod to put them both to death; which A S well to justific part of my preceding Discourse. was no sooner done, and Antipater freed from the Jeaas to acquaint you with the pernicious Tenents of lousie of their Succession, but he begins to think Perod the Church of Rome, how dangerous they are both to himself had lived too long: wherefore entring into a Prince and People, I have here inferted some few of Confpiracy with Herod's own Wife, as well as with Pharoas and many others, he decreed to poyfon him: their Canons, which all Papifts are oblig'd to believe and yet not being willing to be prefent himfelf at the exefubmit to. curion of it. (for fear of some popular Tumult) he ab-Canons which the Romiff Church holds, to the sented himself and went to Rome. But providence disco-Ruine and Dishonour of Princes, are these vering this Plot to Herod, it foon after cost Antipater his Life; and may all fuch Traytors fucceed accordwhich follow. Thefe things (most worthy Citizens) I have prefu-1. The Emperor is the Bishop of Rome's Subject, and med to offer to your perufal, in respect that upon the the Bishop of Rome may revoke the Emperor's Sentence in death of any King, your Lord Mayor (then in being) Temporal Caufes. 2. Princes

名古屋大学附属図書館所蔵 Hobbes I 40695974 Nagoya University Library, Hobbes I, 40695974

名古屋大学附属図書館所蔵 Hobbes I 40695974 Nagoya University Library, Hobbes I, 40695974